Winter Weather Driving Tips

Slip, Sliding...No Way!

Frozen precipitation can be a headache for drivers, if you're not prepared.

A winter driving kit is a must!
Your winter driving kit should include:

- Bag of abrasive material (sand, salt or cat litter)
- Gloves or mittens
- Ice scraper
- Small snow shovel
- Cloth or paper towels
- Booster cables
- Traction mats
- Blanket
- Warning flares or triangles
- Flashlight
- Cell phone
- Window washing solvent

Tips for Driving in Ice and Snow

As much as we hate to admit it, winter is here. And while the snowflakes provide some beautiful scenery, they can quickly create challenging driving conditions. While we remember the importance of wearing our seatbelts and paying attention to other drivers, it's important to remember winter driving techniques to ensure safe travels. Since it may have been a few years since you've had a Driver's Ed refresher, check out these tips for driving on ice and snow.

1. Prepare your vehicle. Check your battery to make sure it has enough charge to make it through the cold winter months and make sure all of your vehicle's lights are in working order. Make sure your tires are in good condition to provide you with good traction.
2. Check your tire pressure. The amount of traction that exists between the tires and the roadway surface determines how well your vehicle accelerates, turns and stops. Make sure your tires are properly inflated and keep in mind temperature swings can cause changes to your vehicle's tire pressure.
3. Don't use cruise control. Traction is greatest just before the wheels spin. Gentle pressure on the accelerator pedal when starting is the best method for retaining traction and avoiding skids - especially if your vehicle lacks traction control. The use of cruise control can cause your vehicle to lose traction due to sudden speed changes. Avoiding cruise control also allows drivers to react faster to changing situations on the road.
4. Keep plenty of gas in your tank. By keeping your gas tank at least half full during winter months, you can avoid gas line freeze-ups. The weight of the fuel also adds additional weight to the vehicle to increase traction, while the additional could be valuable if you are left stranded due to an accident or slide-off.
5. Watch for changing road conditions. Rapidly changing temperatures, wind and other factors can cause road conditions to rapidly deteriorate. Be especially mindful when traveling on bridges, overpasses or shaded spots, as these are some of the first locations where ice can form on the roadway.
